FLORICULTURE

India is bestowed with several agro-climatic zones conducive for production of floriculture products. Floriculture or flower farming is the study of growing and marketing flowers and foliage plants. It basically deals with cultivation of flowering and ornamental plants. The flowers can be used for direct sale in the market and thus set up a small scale industry. Indian floriculture industry comprises of flowers such as Rose, Tuberose, Glads, Anthurium, Carnations, Marigold etc. Cultivation is undertaken in both open farm conditions as well as state-of-the-art poly and greenhouses. During the last two decades floriculture industries took giant steps in the export arena. This era has seen a dynamic shift from sustenance production to commercial production.

Government of India has identified floriculture as a sunrise industry and accorded it 100% export oriented status. Owing to steady increase in demand of flower, floriculture has become one of the important commercial trades in Agriculture. This year due to outbreak of Coronavirus (COVID-19) disease an online training on floriculture was provided to the students as it has immense potential for generating gainful self-employment. The session included the training the students techniques for production of planting materials like seeds, cuttings, budding and grafting.

The students were thus made familiar with the soil's physical and chemical properties like texture, soil structure, drainage, erosion as soil is the first step towards planting a floriculture crop. Use of various types of containers for germinating seeds and rooting of cuttings, and growing of plants was explained. Comprehensive information on different types of containers and methods of filling up pots and polythene bags was demonstrated and students were made to perform the same as part of the training.

Different vegetative methods of plant propagation viz., budding, cutting, grafting and air layering were demonstrated and explained. The students also were made to perform these techniques individually so that they could learn the art and develop the skill.

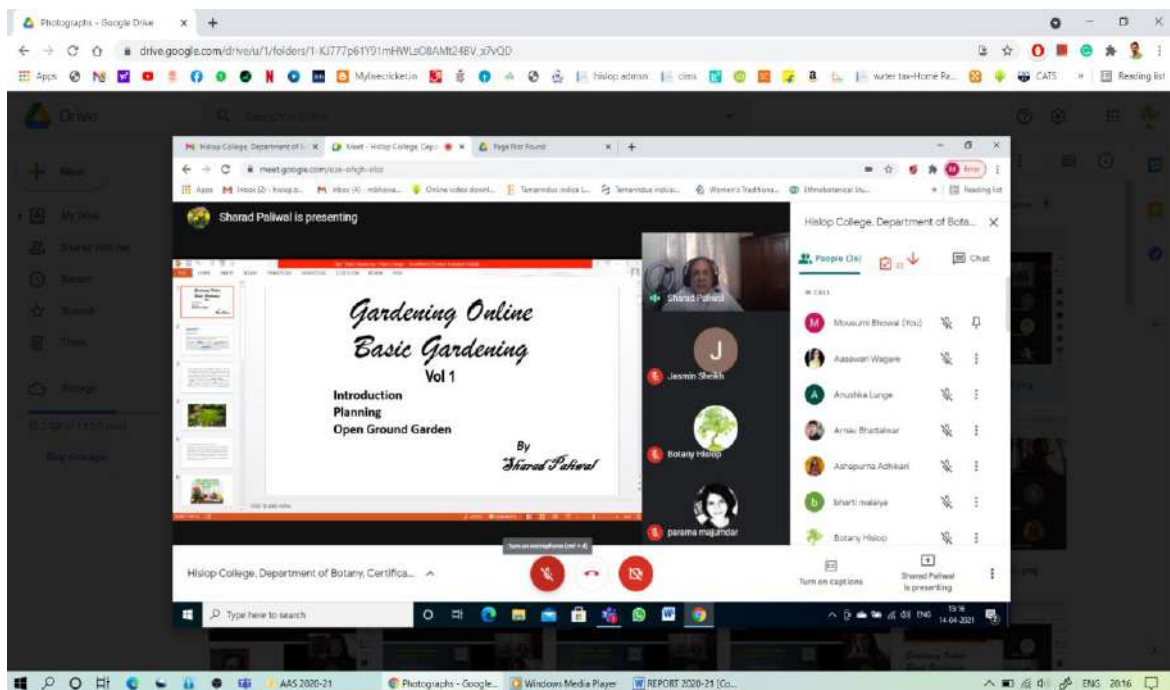

Grafting and budding are horticultural techniques used to join parts from two or more plants so that they appear to grow as a single plant. In grafting technique, the upper part (scion) of one plant grows on the root system (rootstock) of another plant. Budding is a grafting technique in which a single bud from the desired scion is used rather than an entire scion containing many buds. The development of roots on a stem while the stem is still attached to the parent plant is called layering. Stem cuttings include a plant stem tip or a portion of stem without apex with one or more nodes removed from the parent plant and are capable of rooting. It is used to grow a new plant which is exactly a copy of the parent plant. These techniques helped the students to understand science and the art of horticulture.

Further a session on soil bed preparation, germination tray preparation, seed sowing, maintenance, and disease control of seedlings was also explained. Transplantation of seedlings and precautions involved were also explained. Students were made to carry out these processes as a part of their training.

GARDENING

Gardening has always been a work of art. Gardening is no new idea, gardens have been in existence for a long time. However, gardens have evolved over time, and urban gardening is the new trend. Gardens also stand as a representation of the art and culture of that period of time. The oldest type of garden was known as "forest garden" of the prehistoric times. Gardening industry has evolved over time to witness various types of gardening to suit the needs and keep up with the ever-changing environment. Various gardening styles have been in practice-- from Mesoamerican gardens and Mesopotamian gardens to contemporary gardens and naturalistic habitat gardens. Gardening industry is expected to witness a spending of over $49.3 billion by 2023, says a study. This number shows us how the urban society is moving towards gardening and the potential of growth. With such a fast-paced development, there is no doubt that this could be one of the job-creating industries and a contributor to the economy.

Keeping this in mind a training session on gardening was conducted for students. Firstly, the basic concept and scope of gardening were taught. Followed by the session on basic tools, material and techniques used to perform gardening were demonstrated. The selection of plants to be grown also plays an important role in having a good garden. Ferns are one of the best choices since they are easy to grow and also cover a lot of area. Bromeliads could also be suitable owing to their shallow roots and less space utilisation. Succulents and Crotons could be other options for a vertical garden. Hence, students were taught about plant selection to maintain a garden.

Healthy soil is the basis of healthy plants and a good garden. When garden soil is in good shape there is less need for fertilizers or pesticides. The soil is a storehouse for all the elements plants need to grow: nutrients, organic matter, air, and water. Soil also provides support for plant roots. Hence, one session was conducted to explain the soil structure, type, physical and chemical properties of soil and role of soil amendment in improving soil health for gardening purposes. This session concluded with the aquatic gardening basics, plants used and how to make and maintain your own aquatic garden. This session was followed by plant tissue culture techniques.

TISSUE CULTURE TECHNIQUES

Tissue culture is the cultivation of plant cells, tissues, or organs on specially formulated nutrient media. Under the right conditions, an entire plant can be regenerated from a single cell. Plant tissue culture is a technique that has been around for more than 30 years. Tissue culture is seen as an important technology for developing countries for the production of disease-free, high quality planting material and the rapid production of many uniform plants. The most extensive practical application of tissue culture techniques to horticultural crops involves the multiplication of ornamental plant species. The technique enables production of plants in a small laboratory space round the year, independent of season. Many commercial laboratories were established around the world for mass clonal propagation of horticultural plants. A hands-on training on Tissue culture techniques was designed to provide the theory sessions and lab exercises. The session included the following:

Orientation lecture was undertaken in order to introduce the basic concept of plant tissue culture with special emphasis on floriculture. Students were introduced to different instruments used in Plant Tissue Culture. The principle and working of all the instruments were also discussed in detail and made aware of handling of instruments. The importance of sterilization, media preparation and handling were taught which are of prime importance in Plant tissue culture.

Basics of plant cells tissue culture requirements, preparation of stock solution for culturing, media compositions, media preparations were explained. The importance of maintenance of aseptic condition during inoculation was imparted. The explants inoculation was taught and students had hands on experience in explants inoculations. This session was followed by training on mushroom cultivation.

MUSHROOM CULTIVATION

The third part of the curriculum is Mushroom cultivation. Mushroom farming is one of the most profitable agri-businesses that one can start with a low investment and less space. In India, it is growing gradually as an alternative source of income for many people. The module is intended to concentrate on the basic needs of a cottage scale industry. Button mushroom, oyster mushroom and paddy straw mushrooms are the three major types used for cultivation in India. The oyster mushrooms were cultivated to train the students with the basic know-how of mushroom growth. These techniques efficiently incorporate the farmyard by-products like straw, hay etc. as a substratum to grow mushrooms. The students were given training that encompassed sterilization techniques for substratum and the culture room, bagging, media preparation etc. The training began with the demonstration of fumigation of mushroom rooms followed by sterilization of straw for bagging. Upkeep of the bags and harvesting methods are taught to the students.

Demonstrations for media preparation, spawn generation, etc. are also covered in the course module. It takes approximately 15 weeks to complete an entire production cycle, from the start of composting to the final steaming off after harvesting has ended. This session was followed by training on vermicomposting.

VERMICOMPOSTING

Vermicomposting is the process by which worms are used to convert organic materials (usually wastes) into a humus-like material known as vermicompost. The goal is to process the material as quickly and efficiently as possible. Earthworms consume biomass and excrete it in digested form called worm casts. Worm casts are popularly called as Black gold. The casts are rich in nutrients, growth promoting substances, beneficial soil micro flora and having properties of inhibiting pathogenic microbes. Vermicompost is stable, fine granular organic manure, which enriches soil quality by improving its physicochemical and biological properties. It is highly useful in raising seedlings and for crop production. Vermicompost is becoming popular as a major component of the organic farming system.

Understanding the potential of vermicomposting, in this module students were trained on the Vermicomposting technique and preparation of biopesticide with Trichoderma formulation for introducing Trichoderma cultures to the compost, thus enhancing and enriching the organic formulation. The increased knowledge of the soil food web and the need for new, safer fertilizer and pesticides have made the raising of red worm and protection of Vermicompost and related products commercially feasible.

This training included the introduction of the process of composting by using earthworms. The common earthworm species used are Eudrilus eugeniae, Eisenia foetida and Lumbricus rubellus etc of which Eudrilus eugeniae was used in the training process. Earthworms live in the soil and feed on decaying organic material. After digestion, the undigested material moves through the alimentary canal of the earthworm, a thin layer of oil is deposited on the castings.

The screenshot shows a Zoom meeting interface. The main content is a presentation slide with a green header that reads "Allied Agricultural Skills Certificate Course 2020-21" and "Department of Botany, Hislop College, Nagpur". The central image shows several red earthworms in dark soil, with the text "How to Vermicompost!" overlaid. Below the image, it identifies "Dr. Mayank Varun, Asst. Prof., Botany, Hislop College, Nagpur". The Zoom interface includes a meeting title "Botany Hislop is presenting", a list of participants in the call (Mayank varun, Aasawari Wagare, Anushka Lunge, Ashapurna Adhikari, Botany Hislop, Botany Hislop Presentation, Devika Doye, Gauri Anjankar, Irene George), and a bottom toolbar with icons for mute, video, and chat.

For the training purpose a pit made of bricks of 20 sq. feet with a depth of 1 meter was used. The pit was protected by shade to prevent from direct sunlight, water and predatory birds. Pit was covered by a layer of loamy soil which was moistened and Eudrilus eugeniae were inoculated. The pit was then covered by a layer of agro wastes. Daily watering is not required for vermibed. But 60% moisture should be maintained throughout the period. Earth worm casting are the best imaginable potting soil for greenhouses as well as gardening and farming. All nutrients of it are water soluble making it an immediate plant food. The effect of vermicompost is immediately visible. They make the plant grow fast and strong. Vermicompost appears to be generally superior to conventionally produced compost in a number of important ways.

Trichoderma (plant beneficial fungus) is a common soil inhabitant broadly distributed in terrestrial ecosystems and plays many important roles in diverse natural environments. Although the fungus absorbs nutrients from dead organic materials as a saprophyte, the majority of its population is concentrated in nutrient rich niches like the rhizosphere. In agriculture, Trichoderma is primarily known for its biocontrol activities against soil borne phytopathogens but other multifarious activities have also been recorded by various researchers.

Trichoderma is a very useful fungus for industry and as a biocontrol agent; it has shown little host specificity, colonizing most plants and it is widely studied fungi and most commonly used as biological control agents in agriculture and their products as alternatives to synthetic agro-chemicals. Understanding the potential of this, the students were trained on preparation and introducing Trichoderma cultures to the vermicompost, thus enhancing and enriching the organic formulation. Trichoderma fortified are effective biofungicides, enzymatically degrading other fungi, producing antimicrobial compounds that kill pathogenic fungi, and outcompeting pathogenic fungi for space and nutrients.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

The development of a country relies on the employability of its individuals, and to create self-reliant individuals the Government of India has enhanced the thrust on skill-oriented courses. However, the current scenario of Covid-19 and social distancing thereof, has become a major impediment in the conduction of any hands-on training. Thus, the Department of Botany, Hislop College, seeks to propose an online skill development course in the field of agricultural extension. This course endeavors to encompass three broad ambit proficiencies of Floriculture, Mushroom Cultivation and Vermicomposting via an online demonstration medium. The department seeks to enroll college students as well as college dropouts and farmyard workers for this course. If granted, this will be the fifth session of this certificate course and first session to be conducted via this online mode.

While designing this course and its syllabus, the Department has banked upon its experience of undertaking UGC approved Career Oriented Courses (COC) in Floriculture and Mushroom Cultivation for 5 years. The course is intended to be a one-month engagement for the students and has been designed based on the guidelines received from RTMNU Department of Continuing and Adult Education & Extension. The syllabus will deal with the basics of each of the three branches along with a hands-on training.

The department has an established infrastructure with ICT-enabled classrooms, WiFi-enabled campus, Mushroom cultivation room, well-established floriculture unit and a working Vermicompost unit. The teaching staff of the department is experienced and enthusiastic to engage classes for these vocations. They are also well-equipped with laptops having HD webcam and digital pen tablets to conduct classes on online mode.

The department has a history of extremely lucid student-teacher interaction and is looking forward to the induction of students for this certificate course for its first online term.
